dear life in a wear pass. The formation saucy, and somehow the pretty home that she loves so much seems narrow and confining. I say to such a one, at almost any cost get out of your own house, for a day at least. It is good for us to hold our children and husbands off at arm's length, once in a while, as an artist does his picture; we while, as an artist does his picture; we get a better view and forget the little blotches here and there that annoyed

I have a friend who says whenever she feels blue she puts on her best clothes, and really some of us will find that will do us good. Find out some one to help or to cheer if you can, but do not refer to your downheartedness. The moment we confers a feeling, be it love, hatred or low spirits, we intensify to moment we comes a reemig, or he love, hatred or low spirits, we intensify it. Act and speak cheerfully and you will find you are feeling brighter soon. I should like to whisper a word to some of the husbands scattered through some of the husbands scattered through the land. In the spring of the year "mother" gets nervous—she snaps at the children, tells Tom too sharply to "stop that whistling," and perhaps suddenly breaks down and takes to her bed. The poor husband is completely surprised—can't understand the matter that the great to his business, or surprised—can't understand the matter at all. He goes to his business, or works upon his farm day after day, and is in and out from morning until night. He sees his business friends from day to day, and seldom is troubled with the children's racket, for they are trained to be quiet and to have every thing in order when paps comes home.

But all through the long winter how different it has been with the wife. She has been from morning till night, from week to week, and month to month, with three or four children constantly demanding her care, thought and pa-

with three or four children constantly demanding her care, thought and patience. Her servants are a care, and part of the time, if in the country, she may have been without any. In nine cases out of ten, she has not been free from this care, away from the four walls of her home, for two days at a time within six months. She needs to breathe

If you have a friend who is tied to her home by the care of two or three children, can't you offer to keep her home for her a week or two? Even suppose you merely change houses for a time—any change is good.

To Clear Wooler Cloth—Take equal parts of spirits of hartshorn and that their wives must have their holiday from the care of children and servants, from the care of children and servants, so the care of children and servants, from the care of children and servants, so the care of children and servants, so the care of children and servants.

It was a severe blow, and he staggered under it; but he fought well for himself, protested that his life was ruined, asked if she could not learn to love him, and in all ways did the proper thing. She was immovable, however, and he sadly and reluctantly took his leave. While his eyes were full of gathering tears he bade his faltering farewells, then closed the door upon his hopes. A moment later he opened it, stepped back into the room, and with tears in his voice, brokenly murmured, "I hope this will make no difference about your coming to the store, Miss.—; and that your mother will continue to trade with us. I shall be happy to give the usual discount. be happy to give the usual discount. Our stock is large and varied, our aim to please." And the door shut finally, leaving him alone in his grief.—Port-
